GOVERNMENT MEN RAID BIG STILL

Federal Agents Arrest Two Men At Tinley And Destroy Still

Federal agents swooped down on a still in the northeast corner of the south subdivision at Tinley Park at 6:30 o'clock Monday evening and arrested Irving Bell, 28 years old and Andrew Davis, 38 years old.

Bell is married and with his wife and three children lived in the place where the still was found. He has been a resident of Tinley Park for about a year and a half.

Both Bell and Davis were taken to Chicago and were to have had a hearing before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker Tuesday morning.

The Federal men said the still had been in operation about eight months. It was of 750 gallons capacity and was located in the basement of the dwelling. A false partition separated the still from the basement proper. A steam boiler, cooker and the usual still apparatus was found in addition to 52 five gallon tins of alcohol having an estimated value of about $520.

Tuesday morning a large truck from the Federal department in Chicago with a number of men came out and dismantled the plant. All the material of the still was to be stored in a government ware house and after the trial is to be sold for junk.

People in the neighborhood of the still often saw cars drive up to the place under cover of darkness and leave in darkness.

Moonshine liquor was redistilled for the alcohol which was said to have been about 190 proof.

Mokena Garden Club News

The Mokena Garden Club met in the home of Mrs. John Walsh Tuesday afternoon. The club plans to buy Chinese Elm trees and will give them to anyone who wants a tree. Mrs. Anton Benson is in charge of the trees, so anyone wanting any should see or telephone Mrs. Benson, Mokena 17-J as soon as possible as it will soon be time to plant them. Also now is the time to trim trees and shrubs.

At the meeting Mrs. C. Sippel read an article on 'Roots' and 'My Rock Garden.' Mrs. Lawrence read an article entitled 'Learning to Know Wild Flowers.' Mrs. E. Cooper, 'Why don't my Peonies Bloom?' and Mrs. Walsh on 'Things We Say.'

MY ROCK GARDEN
My lovely garden's filled with rocks, I hauled them miles of city blocks, I worked for weeks—no time for rest,

I spoiled my shoes, I tore my dress, Scratched my arms and bumped my toes—

How they hurt, nobody knows. I built it up and tore it down, Dug a pool deep in the ground. I planted flowers of every kind Until the rocks I could not find. Again I moved those lovely rocks, Without so many bumps and knocks. I hired a man who worked for days. We changed those rocks in many ways.

We laid a walk—another pool. Again I hoed and raked the soil, And then I heard to my dismay, 'Rock gardens are not here to stay!' Dismayed indeed was I at that— They'd soon be like last summers' hat!

But styles may come and styles may go Like summer's heat and winter's snow,

But my rock garden's here to stay! It grows lovelier every day. In propaganda I'll take no stock, I shall never—never move a rock.

Old Railway Coach Under Discussion

The village board of Mokena at their meeting Tuesday night discussed the matter of the old railway coach being left sitting along Front street west of the depot. The car was donated for church purposes to the Catholic church at Lincoln Estates but after being removed from the railroad trucks it was placed on moving dollies and left here after the cold weather set in.

The board felt that the coach should be disposed of in some way if it is not moved when warm weather comes. The matter is to be taken up with either the church or the Rock Island railroad.

Will Hold Community Sale

A community sale will be held in Orland township along 159th street in the near future. The date and place will be announced next week.

RESIDENT OF MARLEY DIES AT 90 YEARS

Mrs. Maria P. Dancer, who would have been 91 years old next Saturday, died Sunday morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. Edward Marshall, at Marley.

She was born in Homer township near Marley on March 7, 1845, and was the daughter of Benjamin and Emily Dancer, early settlers of Will county. She lived her entire life in the vicinity of the home where she was born.

For the past 40 years Miss Dancer had been an invalid.

Private funeral services were held at the home of the niece in Marley for relatives and close friends Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. Ernest L. Snodgrass, pastor of the Marley Community church, officiating. Interment will take place in Hadley cemetery.

May Impose Special Tax

Finding that the regular taxes are not sufficient to meet the running expenses of the village, the Mokena village board has appointed members of the license and finance committees to meet and determine how additional tax can be raised. It is probable that the special taxes abolished a few years ago, will be reinstated.

No School Festival To Be Held

A grade school festival will not be held this year in the Mokena school. Due to the redecorating of the school, classes have been held in the gymnasium. All classes have been conducted excepting those in music, so it is thought best not to try to put on a festival this year with practicing conditions as they are. A program of this kind requires much time spent in practicing as it involves about 125 children.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT MAKES A
SURPRISING DISCOVERY

PROBABLY there is no happier time of the year for Lightfoot the Deer than when the dreadful hunting season ends and he is once more back in his beloved Green Forest with nothing to fear. All his neighbors called on him to tell how glad they were that he had escaped again and how the Green Forest would not have been the same had he not returned.

So Lightfoot roamed about without fear and was happy. It seemed to him that he could not be happier. There was plenty to eat, and that blessed feeling of nothing to fear. What more could anyone ask? He began to grow sleek and fat and handsome than ever. The days were growing colder and the frosty air made him feel good.

Just at dusk one evening he went down to his favorite drinking place at the Laughing Brook. As he put down his head to drink he saw something which so surprised him that he quite forgot that he was thirsty. What do you think it was he saw? It was a footprint in the soft mud. Yes, sir, it was a footprint.

For a long time Lightfoot stood staring at that footprint. In his great, soft eyes was a look of wonder and surprise. You see, the footprint was exactly like one of his own, only smaller. To Lightfoot it was a very wonderful footprint. He was quite sure that never had he seen such a dainty footprint. He forgot to drink. Instead, he began to search for other footprints and presently he found them. Each was as dainty as the first one. Who could have made them? That is what Lightfoot wanted to know, and what he meant to find out. It was clear to him that there was a stranger in the Green Forest, and somehow he didn't resent it in the least. In fact, he was glad. He couldn't have told why, but it was true.

Lightfoot put his nose to the footprints and sniffed of them. Even had he not known by looking at those prints that they had been made by a stranger, his nose would have told him this. A great longing to find the maker of those footprints took possession of him. He lifted his handsome head and listened for some slight sound which might show that the stranger was near. With his delicate nostrils he tested the wandering little Night Breezes for a stray whiff of scent to tell him which way to go. But there was no sound, and the wan-

MEATS AND OTHER FOODS

AS THE main dish of the dinner is usually some form of meat, fish or fowl, something different is always a delight.

Chicken Almonds.

Cut with shears the raw meat from a three-pound roasting chicken. Cut into cubes. Soak one-half cup of dry mushrooms in one cup of water or peel and cut one cup of fresh ones. Cut a large mild onion into cubes. Fry one cup of blanched almonds in four tablespoons of peanut oil until crisp and brown, remove from the oil and keep warm. Place the chicken in the hot oil, add mushrooms and onion and one-fourth of a cup of water. Cook until the meat has lost its color, add almonds, and thicken with a tablespoon of soy sauce, one teaspoon of cornstarch and two teaspoons of water. Serve in a bowl, very hot.

Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.

Have the shoulder blade removed from the meat, wipe with a damp cloth to remove any bits of bone. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fry one small onion in four tablespoons of butter, add two cups of soft bread crumbs, season with salt, pepper and a tablespoon of chopped celery. Mix well and fill the pocket with the stuffing. Put the meat in a roasting pan into a very hot oven to sear the meat well and brown for 15 minutes. Reduce the heat to a moderate oven, add one cup of boiling water and bake 15 minutes to the pound, basting every half hour, adding more water when necessary. Peas are especially good to serve with lamb.

Smothered Broiled Fish.

Broil and chill a fine slice of halibut or salmon. When ready to serve

THE magician shows two wads of paper, one in each hand. He asks a spectator to hold one paper ball; the magician places it within the person's fist.

Then the magician pockets the second ball of paper. A mysterious snap of his fingers causes that ball to join the one which the spectator is holding—so the magician says, and his statement proves correct. Upon opening his hand, the spectator finds both paper balls.

Three balls of paper are used in the trick. In one hand, the magician holds two pressed together so they look like one. This is the "ball" which he places in the spectator's fist. Naturally, when he opens his hand, the spectator finds two instead of one.

The Work That Must Be Done

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY do the work that must be done:

The world has little need of lines
Like these—men first must fell the pines

And build a shelter from the sun.

They do the work ordained of old:
The world has little need of laws
Till they, who seldom seek applause,
Shall feed the hungry, clothe the cold.

They do the work God had in mind:
The world has little need of more,
Though this is all they labor for,
The care and comfort of mankind.

They do the work that God began:
The world has little need of speech,
For they, with service, better teach
Mankind the brotherhood of man.

They do the work, the humble deeds:
The world has little need of art
Until the workers do their part,
For out of them all art proceeds.

They do the work by God begun:
The world has not a greater need
Than hands that house and clothe and feed—

They do the work that must be done.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

Why Physicians Recommend
Milknesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milknesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

The Original Milk of Magnesia Wafers

Washington Digest

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED

By William Bruckart

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—Congress, again, has given a fine illustration of how a horse goes up to the jump, then falls to take it.

Neutrality a Shell
It faltered on the neutrality question. True, congress has re-enacted for another year the neutrality law that was put through under pressure a year ago but it did not have the necessary courage to go into that question and work out anything of a permanent character. The result, I am convinced, is that as soon as there is any excuse whatsoever, neutrality for the United States will be nothing but a shell.

I do not know, nor do I believe anybody can tell at this juncture whether the United States ought to embark on a rigid policy of isolation from affairs of the world but that is a question that is subordinate at this moment. The point is that congress, a year ago, made a great show of neutrality and put on a second stage performance only lately with the same theme song. Since it has backed away from the real issue it begins to appear that the original action was but hollow mockery; that the politicians moved a year ago with the thought in mind that they would not have to go on record so soon and that they could make the country feel it had elected statesmen. But, instead, their course has led them to the point where a decision had to be made—and they have dodged it.

One of the reasons why this neutrality question has become so important is the combination of circumstances that has developed in Europe. Those maneuvers have put our congress on the spot and it, like so many previous times, again has wavered.

It is difficult to forecast what is going to happen in Europe but there are certain signs and portents that may not be ignored. History, as we all know, has a habit of repeating itself and it promises to repeat itself in a hurry this time.

Let us look at the European picture. On the one hand we have an alignment of France and England and probably Russia. On the other, we see Hitlerized Germany, Austria and Italy. There has been nothing more tangible thus far than a baring of fangs. That is, no overt acts have been committed but it always has been the case that the snarling and showing of teeth has provided the setting, the atmosphere, for more serious accusations. It may never happen that Germany or Austria or Italy will take steps which France or Russia could regard as an invasion of national rights and then, again, any one of them at any time may accidentally or deliberately do some minor thing that would provoke hostilities.

The chief significance of the reported alignment of Italy with Germany and Austria is that the Central Powers, as they stood in 1914, have been augmented by the strength of Fascist Italy. It means that the Germany of 1914 has access to the North sea and the Mediterranean instead of just the North sea as occurred 20 years ago.

Coupled with that fact is the condition of a better defense for the Central Powers. If the agreement between Germany and Italy sticks, Germany has only the western and Russian fronts to maintain. It allows for a more compact military program because, instead of guarding against Italy on the south, Germany has an ally in that direction from which sources of supply can be established.

The fresh understandings worked out between France and England really are nothing more than a restoration of the arrangement that existed in the World war. The British, on the surface at least, have no compact with Russia but the French have a very definite agreement with the Soviet. It seems likely, therefore, that if hostilities break out again, the British and the Soviet will have no difficulty in establishing a pact of mutual help.

As a sidelight, it seems to me that the new developments rather turn the spotlight on the policies of Pierre Laval, former French foreign minister. M. Laval, it will be remembered, was ousted because of alleged pro-Italian policies. He sought for months to maintain friendship between France and Italy because he feared to do otherwise would result in alignment of Mussolini with Hitler. The bulk of the French parliament disagreed with him, however, and M. Laval was replaced by Foreign Minister Flandin.

Now, Europe has seen the prompt desertion of Mussolini from the French side and his alignment with Hitler.

So, the old picture has been put together again in Europe with the only change being the placement of Italy on the opposite side of the fence from where that nation stood in 1914. But let not the fact that the alignment differs only because of Italy's position be minimized. It is the most important of the combination that has developed in Europe.

The new situation, insofar as Great Britain is concerned, means that in case of a clash in the Mediterranean between the forces of Mussolini and the British there will be French support. It means, therefore, that Mussolini hardly dare disturb the concentration of British warships around the Suez. To do so would call down upon his head not only the shells of the British fleet but those of the French as well.

For the French, the revived understanding with Great Britain gives support against the slow flow of Hitler lava into the Rhineland which was demilitarized by the Treaty of Versailles at the end of the World war. The French are very touchy about the Rhineland and any attempt by Germany to fortify that territory makes French nerves very jittery. It is only natural, then, that the French look upon the agreement with London as an assurance of security in event Hitler should strike in the Rhineland.

Through it all, foreign advisers indicate that British fists are gradually being doubled up against Hitler. This is true notwithstanding the fact that the new King Edward VIII is trying to be friendly with Germany. Foreign dispatches and private advices explain that there is a notable recurrence among the British of discussion recalling Germany atrocities in the World war. Slowly but surely throughout England the old hatred is arising.

On the northern frontier of Germany there is a new line of steel. The Communist state of Russia looks with disfavor upon the Nazi. My information is that it would take very little to provoke trouble there.

Altogether, the situation is one where, if a stone rolls down a mountain side, it could very easily become the detonation cap that would explode an ammunition dump.

With these facts in mind, one can understand readily the gravity of the relations between the United States and the rest of the world. One can understand as well why congress was rather anxious to avoid legislation of a broader scope in international affairs than already was operative. Yet, this does not alter the fact that if congress had no intention of establishing a real neutrality policy, it should not have embarked on a course designed to that end. It was either engaging in a game of fooling the public a year ago or it has just now demonstrated a most cowardly attitude.

Now, to get back home, we observe a maneuver by President Roosevelt to link North and South American nations into a new agreement. While none of our officials will say that this move has any connection with European development, I believe that observers generally are of the opinion that it has an important bearing on the situation beyond the Atlantic. It ought to be helpful in keeping the United States out of that mess or, if the future forces us into it and, in the meantime, there is a sound arrangement worked out between nations of the western hemisphere, their combined strength ought to put an end to European strife more quickly than if those European nations were left to fight it out alone. In other words, if Mr. Roosevelt can work out a binding agreement between all the nations of the western hemisphere, they can exert a tremendous influence.

This influence will carry further than on the homeland of any of the countries now involved in the European case of jitters. It possibly may extend to the point of becoming the balance of power in the settlement of colonial disputes between the central powers and the newly re-established allies. European interests in South America are important and if our South American neighbors have the important weight of the United States on their side, they will be in a position, for the first time, to force proper adjustment of colonial rights in the western hemisphere insofar as those colonial rights are concerned in settlement of European differences.

Saxony Densely Populated

One of the most densely populated regions in Germany is Saxony. The capital and seat of the government is Dresden, an old town situated on the banks of the Elbe. Another famous city of Saxony is Leipzig, known for its semiannual industrial fairs and as a renowned music center. It was in Leipzig that Bach wrote many of his masterpieces.

Wood for Guitars

The sides and back of guitars are usually made of maple, ash, service or cherry, not infrequently adorned with inlays of rosewood or other woods. The sound board or face is of deal. Hard woods, such as ebony, beech or pear, are used for the neck and fingerboard. The bridge may be of ebony.

Lesson for March 8

JESUS AND THE LAWYER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Good Neighbor.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Who Is My Neighbor?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Be a Good Neighbor.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Whose Neighbor Am I?

The subject, "Jesus Teaches Neighborliness," chosen by the lesson committee, deals only with one side of the question; namely, man's duty to his fellow men; whereas, his first duty is to God.

1. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-28).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 25). The term "lawyer" here means "one versed in religious law, the Scriptures," not "lawyer" in our modern sense of that term. It more nearly corresponds to our theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trip Jesus, to induce him to take such a stand as would weaken his influence as a teacher.

2. Jesus' question (v. 26). "What is written in the law?" He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. Jesus thus robbed him of his own weapon. Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer, he did not evade his question.

3. The lawyer's reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer, declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 28). The straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had or can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and, therefore, convicted of guilt.

11. "Who Is My Neighbor?" (vv. 29-37).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 29). "Who is my neighbor?" This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 30-37). Jesus' reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the parable of the Good Samaritan he makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor and what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear "Who is my neighbor," but also that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor.

a. This destitute and wounded man, left on the wayside by the robbers, is a man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door, or on the other side of the world. Love does not regard locality, nationality, or blood relation. Those who have the spirit of Christ can see their neighbors on every hand.

b. What being a neighbor means. Our supreme consideration should not be, "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is

(1). To be on the lookout for those in need of help (v. 33). Love is always on a journey. It is keen to discern the needs of those with whom it is brought into contact.

(2). To have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as he came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. Those who are Christlike will be likewise moved.

(3). To give to those in need (v. 34). Love does not calculate the cost of its actions. Whenever there is the calculation of cost there is the expression of selfishness. Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy, but are unwilling personally to minister to them. Many times the personal touch is more important than the material aid.

(4). To bind up wounds. If we have eyes to discern we shall see many wounds about us that need attention.

(5). To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is the proof of the genuineness of our love. Those who are like Christ will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those in need.

(6). To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. Much Christian service is partial, leaving the man to take care of himself.

(7). To give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God his only Son; it cost Jesus Christ his life.

Goodness

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good; myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy if I may.

Monograms Make Your Linens Doubly Precious

PATTERN 1126

Variety's the Spice of Life—and monograms, too, for the smartest ones today combine letters in varying sizes. That's why we included four different alphabets—a large, a medium and two small ones—so that you may "scramble" your own. They work up easily and quickly, using a combination of satin, seed and buttonhole stitches with a bit of cutwork. Anyone with "Hope Chest" linens will find these alphabets invaluable. They fit beautifully into a diamond or triangular shape.

Pattern 1126 comes to you with a transfer pattern of an alphabet 3 inches high; one 2 inches high; and two alphabets 1½ inches high; information for placing initials and monograms; illustrations of all stitches needed.

Boy Is Over Eight Feet Tall and Still Growing

Physicians say that Robert Wadlow of Alton, Ill., is still growing at the age of seventeen. That would not be unusual except for the fact that he is 8 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 390 pounds now. Wadlow is regarded as the nation's tallest man and the second tallest in history. A famous Irish giant of the Nineteenth century is said to have exceeded him.

Wadlow recently graduated from Alton high school. He wore a size 8½ cap and a 92-inch gown which was 50 inches around the chest and had 55-inch sleeves. His shoes are size 39. The youth expects to enter Shurtleff college next fall to study law and wants to finish at Washington university in St. Louis.

Barrels Hid Noted Papers;

Queen's Tears Damp Stains
When Grant Duff visited the Register house at Edinburgh in 1862 he was shown a number of valuable and important state documents, including the list made by Mary Queen of Scots of her jewels, and was told that this, with many other valuable papers, had been taken to London in the time of Cromwell "and not sent back to Edinburgh till recent times. These valuable papers were packed in hogsheads and suffered much from the damp."

Joseph Robertson, the greatest of Scottish antiquaries of the period, had a good story about the documents that suffered from the damp. He declared that Miss Strickland mistook the damp stains for the queen's tears and wrote a pathetic little passage accordingly.—Manchester Guardian.

Harpooned Hippo Ambushes Boat; Stiff Battle Ensues

Angered because it had been harpooned a few days before, a hippopotamus lay in ambush and suddenly attacked a ferry boat operating on the Mpaologoma swamp, a well-known Uganda waterway, near Nairobi. Charge after charge was made by the infuriated beast, which nearly boarded the vessel, the water being shallow so that it could obtain a foothold. Six natives, armed with spears, fought the invader until the arrival of a European, who shot it, amid songs and cheers from the deck of another vessel speeding to the rescue.

Length of Suez Canal

The actual length of the Suez canal is about 100 miles, a little more or a little less, depending upon the way in which it is measured. Reference books do not agree as to its exact length. The discrepancy lies in the fact that it may be measured from the southernmost end of Port Said harbor to the northeastern shore of Suez bay at Port Tewfik, or from the De Lesseps statue north of Port Said to the anchorage in the middle of Suez bay.

Thanksgiving—And the American Spirit

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman

Sentinels of the Republic

Thanksgiving Day has been widely characterized as "the most American of all our feasts."

It is an apt description. Apart from Independence Day no national holiday recalls more clearly the primary American qualities of courage and self-reliance.

Originated by a hardy group of pioneers who by their own efforts had established a firm foothold in an unfriendly wilderness, it constituted an expression of reverend gratitude not only for plenty, but for freedom of body and of spirit.

Today, three centuries after that celebration, it is significant to recall that almost every President who issued a Thanksgiving proclamation has sounded that typically American note.

George Washington in his Thanksgiving message of 1789 emphasized "the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed."

Abraham Lincoln, in the dark days of '63, reminded the people of the blessings of freedom.

Many of his successors in office have repeated the thought.

Perhaps that is why the Thanksgiving celebration remains to all Americans not only a solemn religious festival, but an annual reminder of the spirit of those pioneers who were taught to depend on Providence and themselves, rather than on kings and politicians.

Both Independence Day and Thanksgiving continue to celebrate those American qualities of self-reliance and love of freedom. And so long as these days are celebrated, the demagogues who try to teach the people that government should bear all their burdens and politicians rule all their lives, are going to find the going hard, and their message futile.

America still retains the spirit of the first Thanksgiving Day.

Theme for Sunday morning: The Inner Resources Required for Building a Christian World.

The greater task, the greater the man required to perform it. What manner of man must he be who would have a share in the building of a Christian world? Can he work effectively with his present resources? If not, how can he develop enough power to carry thru this very difficult task?

As we deal with this theme next Sunday, we shall really be thinking about the character required in one who would share in building a Christian world. By character is not meant either conventional conduct or community reputation. The term rather has reference to what a man actually is down deep in his own soul. In the character is found the inner resources for this great calling. The achievement of this character is a gradual process. We shall try to suggest how it can be developed. You are invited to share with us in our worship.

This church opens wide its doors to all persons in the community who are seeking a church home. Those who in other communities have worked in other denominations will find a cordial welcome among us. For purposes of a broader relationship this church shares in the work and supervision of the Methodist Episcopal church. Our first concern, however, is to be Christian. Our denominational connections give us an opportunity the better to express our sense of fellowship with and responsibility toward others, as we cooperate in a world-wide task and program.

Plans are now being made to hold a series of three Sunday evening worship and preaching services, beginning March 22. Begin now to arrange your schedule so that you may participate in these community services.

"Old Khabardar"

The nickname "Old Khabardar" was popularly applied to Gen. Sir Colin Campbell, who relieved Lucknow, India, in 1857. The word means "take care," and referred to Sir Colin's caution to his subordinates to "be careful and not lose an unnecessary man." His demonstrated personal bravery and brilliant success made the term one of affection.

Attendance, 6th month: Intermediate room, 94.68 percent. Tardy, 2.

Jr. High room, 94.50 percent. Tardy, 3. High school, 93.74 percent. Tardy, 6. Primary room, 91.05 percent. Tardy, 2. Total tardy, 13. Average attendance, 93.49 percent. Average attendance last month 94.00 percent. Tardy cases last month, 2.

The above percentages show that our attendance is fairly good in spite of adverse weather conditions. Our average attendance of 93.49 percent can and should be improved however.

A high average is good because it shows that the students are forming good habits, and it also tends to increase the learning scale. But there is another important result of a high average attendance, as the following quotation from the "Educational Press Bulletin" shows.

"Since almost nine tenths of the State Aid Fund is allowed because of average daily attendance of elementary pupils throughout the state, we come to realize that the taxpayers of each school district should be greatly concerned when a child attends school irregularly. Every $11 allowed by the state, a year, for each child in average daily attendance in any school in the state of Illinois provides the district receiving it with $11.00 that local taxation on property does not need to provide."

This means that when a student is absent a certain amount of money is deducted from one district's allotment. Let's all co-operate to increase our average attendance and therefore profit educationally and financially.

FARM BUREAU

OFFICIAL GETS PROMOTION

At this week's meeting of the Cook County Farm Bureau Board of Directors, their Ass't Farm Adviser, M. E. Tascher, tendered his resignation. This was accompanied by a statement that he had received an offer from the officials of the Grundy County Farm Bureau at Morris, Illinois, to take the position of Adviser there which has been recently vacated.

This move is an advancement along the line of work in which Mr. Tascher has been engaged for the last six years and it is a recognition of the success he has attained and the general satisfaction he has given while in the employ of Cook County Farm Bureau.

It is with considerable regret that the local organization feels impelled to accept this resignation as Mr. Tascher has been so efficient in his work and so pleasing in his contact that he has been a very material help in building the Farm Bureau to its present strength and efficiency.

One of his main interests has been the boys and girls of our communities and in this connection he has labored long and earnestly in building the 4-H project. As the result of it there are now hundreds of boys and girls in Cook County who have, during the past six years, entered into one phase or another of the many projects under 4-H and can look back on those years under the direction of Mr. Tascher as one of the turning points in their lives.

The Congress of the United States has just passed a new farm bill and if it is to be effective this year, work must be started on it without any unnecessary delay. Due to this fact the Farm Bureau recognizes that the Grundy County Farm Bureau needs their leader, so the local organization is consenting to Mr. Tascher's making the change sometime within the present month. No statement has been made at this time as to what will be done to replace him.

We wish Mr. Tascher all the success in the world in his new move and hope that his relations there will be as pleasant as they have been here.

Distemper Symptoms

Distemper is the most common of all serious ailments of the dog. The early symptoms are a slight cough, fever, dry nose, loss of weight and appetite, hot skin and a tendency to sleep. Later discharge from the eyes and nose, quick breathing and general inertia follow.

FOOD FASHIONS FOR LENT!

By MARYE DAHNKE, Kraft Cheese Institute

"And leap year makes it twenty-nine!" Just as if twenty-eight days in February weren't enough for this business of meal-planning! With the Lenten season, and Leap year, and everyday budgets all to be considered at one time, this is just the season to add a few new staple recipes to the cookbook, to help tide over winter days.

That staple commodity, cheese, is an ever-present aid in planning meals for the Lenten season—and for meals the year-around. Known for centuries as the perfect Lenten food, cheese has a way of transforming ordinary dishes. Sharp American or "Old English" cheese can be included in so many interesting ways in late winter menus that well-stocked pantry shelves should harbor a generous supply. The combination of fish with cheese is ideal for the season—and a happy pair to satisfy winter-whetted appetites. One of the most delicious of these is well-named, "Cheese and Crab Delight." It is attractive enough to serve as the principal attraction for a party luncheon, and substantial enough to form the main dish for a family dinner. A molten cheese sauce provides just the proper setting for delicately flavored crabmeat—and the resulting delicacy is as pleasant to the eye as it is to the appetite.

Cheese and Crab Delight
2 tbs. chopped green pepper
2 tbs. butter
2 tbs. flour
1/2 tsp. mustard
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
1 cup cooked & strained tomatoes
1 cup dehydrated grated cheese
1 egg slightly beaten
1/2 cup milk
1 cup crabmeat

Cook green pepper in butter for 5 minutes, blend in flour; add seasonings, tomatoes, cheese and eggs; cook a few minutes. Heat the milk before adding the other ingredients, then crabmeat. Serve on rounds of toast or crackers. Save 1 tablespoon of cheese to be sprinkled on top when serving.

Some additional main-dish Lenten specialties made with cheese are easily made as follows: They are destined to remain popular family favorites the year around.

Halibut With Cheese Sauce
2 cups milk
2 tbs. butter
4 tbs. flour
Salt, pepper, paprika
2 cups grated American cheese

Make a sauce with the milk, butter and flour, seasoning to taste. When thickened, add the grated cheese. Arrange half-inch slices of halibut in a buttered baking dish, pour the cheese sauce around them and bake in a moderate oven, 350°, until the halibut is tender. Remove the fish to a crystal platter, surround with the sauce and garnish with parsley.

Macaroni Cheese Timbales
1 cup grated American cheese
1 1/2 cups milk
2 eggs
1/2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Salt, pepper
1 1/2 cups cooked macaroni (broken)
6 mushy tomato caps
1 pound all-milk cheese
Salt, pepper

Blend well the grated cheese, milk, well-beaten eggs and seasonings. Divide the macaroni equally among 6 buttered custard cups and fill cups with the cheese mixture. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, 350°, until firm. Unmold onto a platter, garnish each timbale with a mushroom cap, and serve with sauce made with the all-milk cheese, milk and seasonings cooked in a double boiler until cheese is melted.

Cheese and Vegetable Casserole
2 cups cooked spaghetti
3 cups cooked peas
1 onion chopped
1 green pepper, chopped

Continental Flag

The Continental flag was raised upon the first vessel of the navy authorized by congress in 1775. This was the Alfred, formerly a merchant vessel called Black Prince, converted into a 24-gun frigate.

Prof. Smug Tugwell

Mr. Tugwell (everybody genuflex) says advertising is a sinful waste of money.

Joel Cheek died Friday, down in Jacksonville, Fla. His home was in Nashville. He started life, as Bill Nye used to say, with "one suspender and a sore toe." He was a grocery clerk. Soon he owned the business. He made coffee, put it in cans ready to serve. It was an idea. It was his idea. He advertised. He put millions of dollars into advertising. Nobody paid any more for his coffee than they did for coffee that wasn't advertised. Millions of people bought it because they like the idea. It has been repeated and repeated since by other coffee merchants. Joel Cheek and his partner sold out for 40 millions of dollars.

There are two kinds of values—that which is inherent in the article and the mind value. That is peculiar to the customer. Mind value is the thing that makes two women argue over the respective merits of cheese, fur coats, or flowers. Advertising impresses on the mind the certain things in life that may please. There would be no national distribution of a thousand items of merchandise if it were not for advertising—that is, if those things that one thinks about once in a while were not continually impressed upon one by the repetition of the advertising. Dr. Tugwell says advertising adds to consumer cost. It is exactly the other way around.

Advertising took oatmeal out of a barrel in which mice slept and placed it in clean packages. So it did to prunes and pickles. It took the orange from the toe of the Christmas stocking and made it a nation's fruit food. It made the public finicky about the kind of bread it bought. It put dresses on the market and took away the uncertainty of what to wear. Advertising raised the standard of living in millions of homes.

The smart Mr. Tugwell is ignorant of human beings, human behavior, and of the ordinary commonplaces of life when he says it increases costs. Bacon was once a chunk of hog meat. It was glorified into something else by the pictured beauty of a slab of this food; that, too, is the story of ham and a hundred other foods. Advertising has and will continue to increase consumption and lower prices.

What made a nation drink tomato juice and ask for canned pineapple? What made the people want canned soups and freshly baked crackers and cookies in packages? Surely not by making better cakes, cookies, and crackers than any one else, but by first making good foods and then telling the astigmatic world about it in type and picture.

Long before Christ preached his sermon on the Mount or told his disciples to go out into the world and tell every one about the new plan of salvation the Chinese were putting printed placards on the walls and movable types were used to advertise the ukases of Chinese rulers.

Tugwell does actually believe in advertising. Let all the newspapers of the nation, all the magazines, and all the publications—radio and all channels for the dissemination of information—be closed against Mr. Tugwell and he would last about as long as the more or less celebrated feather in hell.

Tugwell lives on publicity. It took him out of his natural obscurity and gave him a place in the sun. Otherwise he would have been neither asset nor liability—a nonentity. That is advertising. He would die like any other microbe if there was nothing on which to feed. His feed is the beating of the tom-toms advertising his exploits. He believes his own attitude in advertising.

American Passion Play Opens April 5 At Bloomington

There is a general feeling that the world is on the eve of a great religious awakening. The tremendous interest manifested in this year's American Passion Play, at Bloomington, Illinois, is evidence that men and women are commencing to turn to things spiritual and are seeking a better understanding of the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, the only man who has offered to the world a plan of life which can insure peace, happiness, prosperity, and moral triumph, not only for individuals but for nations as well.

The American Passion Play will open its thirteenth season on Palm Sunday, April 5, continuing to May 31, 1936. This play is acknowledged to be the greatest production of its kind in the world. So stupendous is it, and so soul searching that those who see it not only marvel at it, but talk about it for weeks, after they have seen it.

A cast of two hundred and fifty men, women, and children, who generously donate their time and talent, are concerned in its production. The sixty scenes, from the Sermon on the Mount to the Ascension into Heaven, are portrayed exactly as they are recorded in the Four Gospels. Each scene is as correct in detail as exhaustive research is able to determine.

The testimony of many thousands who have witnessed the play is that it has a soul—that the play possesses a quality not found in any other similar production, and that quality is deep spirituality. Every person leaving the auditorium at the close of the presentation is under a tremendous spiritual impulse. So real is the play that Jesus of Nazareth seems to live again.

The American Passion Play is a highly educational institution, because it visualizes in an understandable manner, the life and works of Jesus of Nazareth.

The testimony of hundreds of religious workers, Sunday school officials, and students of the Bible, who have witnessed the play, is that it has been a great help to them in getting a better understanding of Jesus of Nazareth and His teachings.

Every man, woman, and child should see this production, which is fast becoming a National Institution.

Government by Law—or by Edict?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Dominant among the demands of men who fought the Revolution was the right to a voice in the making of laws under which they were governed.

By their victory our fathers won that right. Jealously they guarded it—in both Federal and State constitutions. Under the system thus established, the enactment of law was reserved to men chosen by the people and responsive to their will. It is the traditional American system.

But there is another type of legislation—known as Administrative Law. It is a system of edicts and decrees, handed down by rulers to subject populations. In its enactment the people have no voice.

That's one reason why so many thoughtful citizens are protesting against the flood of edicts pouring out of the offices of various boards and bureaus at Washington today.

They realize that a whole new body of Administrative Law is being forced on the people, not by their elected representatives, but by appointed chiefs of bureaus and commissions, in whose selection the voters had no choice and over whose actions they exercise no control.

In recent years those citizens have observed a constantly increasing number of examples of extravagance, arrogance and interference with individual rights on the part of Bureaucrats who assumed, or to whom Congress delegated, powers vested only in the people or their elected representatives.

Today they see the growing threat of Administrative Law supplanting, unless checked, our entire American system of legislation—and with it our constitutional form of government.

Bureaucracy and democracy cannot continue to exist side by side. One or the other must yield. Whether or not we shall surrender government by the people for government by Bureaucrats is for us to determine.

As heirs of the patriots who waged a long and bitter war for the right to make their own laws, our decision should not be a difficult one.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Greenberg who have resided on Dr. Spangler's farm for the past five years have moved to a farm near Plainfield.

The campaign for another season of farm production gets under way with an ever increasing number of farmers ordering their telephones back into service. The telephone is a necessary aid to farm management. The farmer with a telephone keeps in touch with markets and buys and sells at prices most favorable to himself. Telephone service is both a home convenience and a business aid, which repays its moderate cost many times over in its usefulness in the management of the farm, and the pleasure and protection it gives to the farm home. A group of relatives and friends gathered in the Carl Schilling home last Saturday evening to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Schilling. Cards and games were played and refreshments were served. Mrs. Schilling received many lovely and useful gifts. A good time was enjoyed by all who wished many more happy birthdays to Mrs. Schilling.

The Ladies Aid society of the English M. E. church met Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Anthony with Mrs. Carrol Strassberg assistant hostess. Sixteen ladies were present. The next meeting of the society will be held in the church in April at which an Easter offering will be taken. Every one is welcome.

There seems to be an epidemic among the school children of chickenpox. Many are absent from school with the illness.

The Golden Needle Club will meet March 14 with Loretta Keuch at two o'clock. This will be a social meeting and all members are requested to be present.

Mrs. Harry Flannery has moved from the subdivision to the Detweiler flat.

Miss Louise Snodgrass of Chicago, our public school music teacher, is ill again and in the hospital. A collection was taken among the school pupils to buy a radio for Miss Snodgrass.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wyman who have been ill all winter are still confined to their home.

Tuesday night was a big night for the Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department, when they initiated ten new firemen at their regular monthly meeting held in the village hall.

Following the initiation, a real feed was put on with Wm. Koehler and G. Dini in charge as chefs. A half barrel of beer furnished plenty of liquid refreshments and all voted the chefs as being A No. 1 cooks. The famous hamburgers of these well-known local chefs hit the spot and were a big demand.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Peter LaLonde on March first.

Even the Tinley Park is on new time in order to conform with the eastern time adopted by Chicago, the village board at their regular meeting Monday night, after discussing the time change, did not officially adopt eastern time. They will, however, officially recognize daylight saving time which goes into effect the last Sunday in April and continue to the last Sunday in September. As a large number of Tinley Park residents are employed in Chicago and as the Rock Island suburban trains operate an hour earlier, the rest of the village is observing the change in time, although everyone seems to be more than dissatisfied with it. Milk trucks arrive an hour earlier which means that the farmers must also work under the new time change.

What's the matter with Walter Mesenbrink? That is query of the Tinley bowlers who claim he had a low bowling score of 132. Was it Elvira or Nellie Ann?

Mr. Carl W. Hedler of Stamford, Conn., spent last Sunday with his Parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Hedler, as did also their daughter Ruth with her husband, Mr. A. A. Scholl and their son James.

Another visitor in the M. E. parsonage was Mr. Chas. Truse of Aurora, Ill.

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church held their monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Friday evening February 28 our regular meeting was held in the home of our president, Mrs. John Swisher.

The Rehabilitation chairman, Mrs. Freitag, made a motion that we hold a fruit shower at our next meeting. This fruit will be taken to veterans at Oak Forest. Each member is asked to contribute some kind of fruit, as much as they care to give.

Mrs. Flannery who has charge of the junior members, would like to have every junior get in touch with her as soon as possible.

In April, which is Child Welfare month, Mrs. Baldwin, chairman of that department, reminded the members to prepare for the "Layette Shower". These layettes, contributed by the Units, are given to needy mothers.

Saturday February 22, the Fourth District gave a luncheon in honor of our department president. Several of our members attended. Mrs. Baldwin was chosen delegate, but being unable to attend, Mrs. Felten went in her place who brought back a very interesting report.

Several members also attended the Fourth District Americanism and National Defense Program, held in Chicago February 27. Mrs. M. Brandau gave a report on that meeting.

Due to a number of chairmen being absent, the meeting came to an early conclusion.

At this time we wish to extend our deepest sympathy to one of our members, Mrs. Frances Rowden in the loss of her father.

TYO Tattler

Next Tuesday night at 7:30, EST, the major winter sports event will get under way with the opening of the first annual TYO basketball tournament which will be held in the Tinley Park school gym for three nights. The final will be played Sunday afternoon. The dates are March 10, 11, 13 and 15.

Radio fans, here's a hot tip! Tune your radios to WGN at 8 p. m. EST Mondays and listen to the adventures of Fibber McGee and Molly and see if you have convulsions and go into spasms of laughter over these two funny comedians. If you don't, then we will know there is something drastically wrong with Mooie Klepper's sense of humor for he practically dies with laughter over the jokes no matter if they are funny or not.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Faculty Flag Pledge

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—I never heard of a law compelling a private individual in times of peace to take an oath to defend our flag and respect our institutions. Neither do I know of laws compelling us to give public jobs to men and women who refuse to take such an oath or requiring us to leave them in their jobs should they violate that oath. From the President of this country on down, the run of officeholders must swear to uphold the Constitution and support the government. Should any one of them wilfully fail to do so, the offender is liable to removal—amid loud cheers! Then why not include teachers and college professors, those whose high task it is to mould youth into stuff fit for citizenship and civic responsibility?

Why should they be suffered to peddle sedition and yet go on drawing salaries from the public fund—these people who claim they have conscientious scruples when what most of us think they really suffer from is Communist biousness? And for the students, as I understand it, the right of free speech and the gift of free education do not mean license to spout treason on a campus or scorn America in a classroom.

A red flag fits an auction sale, but I don't believe I'd ever get used to seeing it aloft over a district schoolhouse.

Political Plagiarism

POLITICS certainly produces copycats. First, the young Republicans meet, being greeted by a typical bounding juvenile, who's the last surviving drummer boy of Shiloh. Then the young Democrats come rallying as fast as wheelchairs will bring them, with their breakfast shawls and their ear-trumpets. The self-proclaimed "young" leader of any party is usually somebody who hopes to set a patriotic example to his grandchildren and at the same time get the old job back.

The Republicans hold a Grass-Roots convention. So this month at Atlanta there'll be what you might call a grass-widow convention for the revolting southern Democrats—absolutely too revolting for words, to hear Jim Farley talk. You see, they've been divorced, but the decree is not yet final.

Southern Democrats are great hands for seeding and remaining so every day in the year except just one day. On election, they become reconciled long enough to vote the straight Democratic ticket. Twenty minutes later, they're off the reservation again. I hear a number of bankers will attend. This would seem to indicate a changing trend. For quite a while after 1929, very few bankers went to Atlanta voluntarily.

Going Nuts in Hollywood

IF, WHILE touring Los Angeles, you see a bushy-headed, wild-eyed, elderly gentleman aimlessly wandering about, don't jump too soon at the conclusion that he's a typical specimen of our famous coterie of hermits.

You see, they laid out Los Angeles and environs on the ground-plan of a drunken angleworm, and the system of numbering houses is further designed to encourage raving insanity. So what you behold may merely be an ex-resident of the Middle West, who came out here years ago to retire and bought him a cozy bungalow and incautiously went for a stroll and has been trying ever since to find his way back home again.

Not all the nuts were nutty when they first arrived. Many of them got that way trying to trace street addresses. After a year and a half here, I'm beginning to have trouble with the knee-reflexes myself.

But there's one consolation about going crazy in Hollywood. Unless you leave town, nobody would ever notice it.

Gen. Liggett's Passing

SO HUNTER LIGGETT is dead at seventy-eight—the only contemporary lieutenant general of the United States army. For 50-odd years, he wore with gallantry and with honor the uniform of his country.

He fought Indians; fought border-bandits; fought Spaniards in Cuba; fought Germans in France; and, at the end, fought off death for many dragging months.

I saw him overseas, commanding our splendid First corps, which he made more splendid still. He was as plain as an old shoe, and as easy to get along with. His officers respected him, his soldiers loved him. They went where he sent 'em, and if they failed in their objective, they didn't come back. They went instead to report at the sills of the judgment seat the reason why they failed.

Behind his back, the Buck private called him "Uncle Ligg"—that ought to give you the idea.

They'll like him over there—Israel Putnam, and Stonewall Jackson, and Forrest, and Grant, and all the rest of our real ones.

DEREK came to me for advice. He was in trouble. Or rather in love. There is a difference.

The girl's name was Santrell. Verda Santrell. I knew her. Every one knew her. She was popular and beautiful and gracious.

"I'm mad about her," Derek said. "I can't eat. I can't sleep. I can't think of anything but that girl."

"You're in love," I said, wisely.

He studied me gravely for a moment.

"Joe," he went on, "I must have her. You must help me to get her."

I cleared my throat importantly.

"Very well," I said.

"Tomorrow night," he said, "I am taking her to the Country club dance. I am going to propose marriage. What shall I say?"

"Humm," I said. "Humm." I scratched my head, a sagacious gesture, I thought.

"Verda is different from the general run," Derek said.

"Humm," I said. "Different, eh?"

"So far," Derek explained, "I have succeeded in holding my own with the dozens of other young men who also want to marry her."

"How," I asked, "have you been holding your own?"

"By being different myself. By not acting natural. By saying things that no normal young man would say. It has kept me on my toes, but I have succeeded in keeping her interested. I feel that tomorrow night when I propose, if I can say it differently, or at least more uniquely than it has ever been said before, I will win her."

"Ah!" I said, enlightened. "And you want me to—er—write—er—your—er—lines—er?"

"Er—Yes—er."

I took down a volume of some plays I had written.

"How's this?" I asked, turning to a love passage: "Darling, at your feet I lay my—"

"No good," said Derek.

"Then this: 'Beloved, all my life I have dreamed of meeting some one—'"

"Lousy," said Derek.

"Then this: 'Precious, I am deeply honored to be able—'"

"Terrible," said Derek.

"Then this: 'Babe, let's get spliced!'"

"Listen," said Derek, "I want this to be different."

"Humm," I said. "Humm." I thought heavily. "Verda, it's difficult to put into words the thoughts that are in my mind. I appreciate my own shortcomings, hence will make no attempt to frame the speech of devotion that involuntarily springs to my lips. Suffice it to say that since the day I first gazed into the depths of your beautiful eyes, a vision of your loveliness has been always in my mind. I have counted to the minutes this moment when—"

"She Stared at Me in Amazement. And Suddenly I Realized the Terrible Thing I Had Done."

"Write that down," Derek interrupted.

"But I haven't finished," I said.

"If I get that far," Derek said, "I'll be able to make up the rest."

I wrote down what he asked.

I added to it a few more lines that came to mind. I handed Derek the typewritten sheet.

"Memorize it," I told him. "It can't fail. I used that passage in 'Love's Torment.' It worked miracles."

"Thanks," said Derek.

He took the sheet and went out. I did not see him again for two days. He was smiling broadly.

"It worked!" I cried. "I knew it would! Tell me, what you have difficulty in memorizing the lines?"

"Not in the least," he said.

"Tell me about it," I urged.

I felt proud of the part I had played.

"Well," said Derek, "it was a lovely evening. Full moon, gentle breeze, fragrant atmosphere. Ideal setting."

"Splendid!" I said. "Though those lines would have worked without the setting."

"We left the dance early," Derek went on. "We drove out to Lake Crystal. I stopped near the bridge at the far end. We were alone. My chance had come. And then—disaster!"

"Disaster?"

"Something happened to my throat. I couldn't talk. I began to tremble. It was cool, but there was sweat on my brow. I tell you, that girl always affected me that way. For a minute, I thought I was lost."

"And then," I said eagerly, "my lines came back to you?"

"Yes," said Derek, "those beautiful lines came back."

"Ah!" I said, breathing a great sigh of satisfaction. "Proceed."

"I turned to her, 'Verda,' I said. 'Er—er—'" She turned to look at me.

"Yes, Derek?" she said.

"Er—er—" I said again.

"What is it, Derek?" she asked. "Well—er—'Well—er—Verda—er—'" And then those beautiful lines leaped to my lips. I gulped. I ran a finger inside my collar. I took a deep breath. I said: 'Verda—er—er—'"

"For heaven's sake," said Verda, "can't you say anything besides er—er—er?"

"That made me a little mad. I looked at her sternly. I said: 'Yes. I can say something else. I love you. I'd like to marry you. How about it?'"

"She stared at me in amazement. And suddenly I realized the terrible thing I had done—the terrible, common-place manner in which I had made my proposal. I groaned inwardly. And then—ah, sweet moment of bliss—Verda fairly flung herself into my arms. 'Oh, darling!' she said. 'I love you, too. And of course I will marry you!'"

"I was overcome. 'What?' I said. 'You will? But that was such a—er—common proposal. I really have a much better one all ready.'"

"Please," said Verda, "never mention it. I had begun to think you weren't a human being. I have loved you for months, except for all the crazy things you seem forever to be trying to say and do. I had made up my mind that when you proposed if you didn't do it like a normal, ordinary man, I would refuse you. But, darling, you were so simple and sweet and adorable, I couldn't refuse! Those were the most beautiful words I ever heard in my life!"

Derek grinned at me.

I stared at him dimly.

I made a sound that resembled a groan.

I shook my head, as if trying to rid it of thoughts that I didn't want there. Presently Derek got up and left.

I sat for a long time.

After awhile I reached up and took down a copy of "Love's Torment." I seized a pencil, turned to my beautiful love passage and crossed out a page and a half of dialogue. On the margin I substituted: "Darling, I love you." I sighed heavily. "Ah, me," I thought. "Ah, me."

Garth put his fingers to his lips for silence, and held a fuse-wrapped stick of dynamite close to his match. The miner let go of his rifle and straightened upon his feet, his hands high above his head.

The match flickered out. Garth dropped the dynamite and darted forward. He was none too quick. The slight thud of the fallen rifle had awakened Huxby. As Garth paused behind the corner of the lean-to, the engineer peered out, with his pistol thrust forward.

As Garth jumped he struck with the butt of his belt-ax. It cracked down on Huxby's wrist. The engineer's pistol dropped. With a curse, Huxby grasped at the weapon, but Garth was quicker. As he caught it up, Huxby clutched at his throat. Garth felled him with a tap of the ax butt on the temple.

Wakened by the sudden flurry, the two miners in the lean-to were grasping at the pair of rifles on which Huxby had lain. Garth whirled the pistol to cover them.

"Hands up, and get out beside your mate," he ordered. "We want only the murderer. But we'll shoot you down like dogs if you interfere."

One of the pair jerked up his hands. The other man hesitated. The miner outside called warningly: "The jig's up, Laney. The other feller has got the drop on us too."

Laney lifted his hands and stared out after his bed-mate. Huxby was staggering up, still dazed from the blow that had felled him. Wild with desperate rage, he struck out furiously. Garth side-stepped and thrust in a tripping foot.

The engineer pitched face-down on the hard-crusted snow. Before he could spring up again, Garth jumped upon his back. The blow knocked him breathless. It was then as easy matter to click Constable Dillon's handcuffs on the wrists of the murderer.

"Stop that cursing, or I'll gag you," Garth said. "There's a lady present. All right, Miss Ramill. Join us."

Huxby fell silent, to gaze like the miners at the skin-clad form that came forward out of the black shadows into the firelight. The girl still carried the constable's pistol raised ready to shoot. Huxby saw enough of her face in its border of wolverine fur to make certain Garth had not been bantering him.

"Lilith! You?"

"Yes, it's me, you cowardly sneak killer! I came after you with Alan, and he has let me catch you."

The murderer twisted around with his back to her and the fire. His head sagged forward. With a sudden return of alertness, Lilith turned her gaze away from his shadowed profile to watch the three lined-up miners.

Garth did not smile at the girl's needless caution. She had earned the right to think herself an invaluable helper. He allowed her to stand guard while he gathered up the three rifles and unloaded them.

"Right-o, Miss Ramill," Garth said. "Sit down. It's all over now but the talking."

She lowered the pistol but drew back where she could watch Huxby as well as the miners. Garth looked soberly at the men.

"If you know Kipling, you'll bear in mind that the female of the species is more deadly than the male. I dare say, though, you can safely venture to lower your hands and sit down with us."

At the welcome permission, the three dropped their arms. Two of them at once squatted on a log. Laney lingered for a surly question, before following suit:

"What's the play?"

"All we came for was to arrest Huxby. Help with the cabin plane, and there will be no mention of any shooting other than his murder of the constable. What wages did he promise you?"

"Double the usual. Tole us he had to get in his assessment work before the freeze-up."

"The claim belongs to me," Garth replied. "I will pay you the double wages."

"Ugh," growled Laney. "You outplayed the d—n fourflusher. It's a deal. You're boss. We're working for you."

Garth walked back into the blackness of the spruce trees. He returned with the floursack packbag, his own and Lilith's buckskin suits, and a hind-quarter of fat caribou meat. At his invitation, the men eagerly went at the frozen meat with an ax, and put the big teapot, full of snow, on the fire.

Lilith and Garth had eaten before coming down from the igloo. They sat back, on a snowdrift, and watched while the others devoured the tender broiled meat and gulped down cups of hot tea. The flesh of the old she-bear had been as tough as leather and her fat very rank.

Huxby continued to sit in morose silence, with his back to the fire. The feasters paid no heed to him. After a time Lilith began to stir uneasily. At last she had to act. She handed her pistol to Garth, and went to put a piece of meat on a spit. When it was broiled, she took it and a cup of tea to Huxby.

He started up at her as if dumfounded, then shook his head sullenly. She put down the cup and plate beside him, and returned to Garth. At his look of cool inquiry, her eyes flashed with defiance.

"I don't care! It's not right to starve anyone."

He replied in a noncommittal tone: "You're a woman."

The murderer took up his cup of hot tea in his manacled hands and drank. He began to eat the meat.

When daylight came, Garth ordered everyone out to the cabin plane. The hard-frozen slush ice gave solid footing over the bog. It also gave a solid foundation out at the plane upon which were based the engineer's lifting operations. The ice had been chopped from around the floats, and a crib built under the inner end of each wing. By holisting first on the outer end of one wing and then the other, the cribs had been heightened until the floats were level with the top of the ice.

A glance inside the cabin showed Garth the body of Constable Dillon lying where he had left it. Laney explained, with a jerk of a mittened thumb to Huxby:

"He first says we'd chuck the stiff under the ice. Then he says, no, to wait an' heave it out when we was flying over the muskies."

"We'll wait still longer," Garth said. "That brave constable is going to receive an honorable burial. Now get to work with those sapling levers. Another pair of logs on the cribs will raise the floats high enough to roller her clear."

Garth showed the men how to skew the rollers for turning the plane. He went to shove sideways on the tail. The plane started to curve around.

A shriek from Lilith whirled Garth face about. Huxby was rushing at him, with an ax lifted high in his manacled hands. Lilith flew at the attacker as if frenzied. She sought to block his charge. He gave her his shoulder with the skill of a football player. It caught her on the chin and sent her spinning.

But the slight check allowed Garth time for a leap in under the ax before the blade could whirl down on his head. His left fist appeared to punch deep into the pit of Huxby's stomach. His right drove up under the chin of the gasping murderer. The uppercut lifted the killer off his feet and dropped him on his face, clean knocked out.

With no more than a glance at his fallen attacker, Garth sprang to help Lilith's dazed effort to sit up. "Well played," he said. "Not hurt, are you?"

"N-no—I—you—he didn't!" she cried, and burst into tears.

Garth gave her a pat on the head, and turned away, embarrassed. "No wonder you're overcome. It's been too much for a girl. We'll hop out of here at once."

He lashed the unconscious killer's wrists to his belt, tied his ankles together, and climbed into the cockpit of the plane. After replacing the breaker points, he had the men take turns spinning the propeller. He then tried the self-starter. The engine roared. Pulled by the whirling propeller, the plane slid forward off the log rollers.

After cutting the gun, Garth ordered two of the men to heave Huxby into the cabin. The third man he sent for the rifles. "I want the one with which he shot Constable Dillon. But you may as well bring the others—also a lot of that bear fat."

He himself went to pick up the still-weeping girl and help her to the second seat in the cockpit. He made sure of the supply of gasoline, and climbed down again to see that the men gave the bottom of the floats a thorough greasing with the bear fat.

After that, when all were aboard, and the rifles in Lilith's keeping, he started the engine. The plane at first moved slowly. The floats dragged on the rough surface of the frozen slush. But when they glided out on the streak of glare ice, the friction became less than that of a water take-off.

Within a half mile the speed had so increased that an easy pull on the joystick sent the plane skimming up off the glassy surface. Garth banked in a long curve to the left, listening to the roar of the warmed motor. Every cylinder was hitting sweet.

He made a wide spiral over the valley for elevation, and drove out eastwards above a saddle in the jagged mountain barrier. When clear of the valley, he did not keep straight on across to the Mackenzie. He turned more to the south.

CHAPTER XII

Squaw Lilith.

The cross-country flight brought the plane to the Mackenzie at the great bend below the Llard. But Garth did not come down at Fort Simpson. He flew on up the vast river to Great Slave lake, and east across the lake to Lake Resolution.

Some time before sunset, he set the cabin plane down at the landing of the Airways base by the mouth of the Slave river. After handling Lilith ashore, he left her standing while he went to speak to the Airways superintendent. That courteous gentleman hastened to tell the girl that his wife would be delighted if the daughter of Mr. Burton Ramill would honor their hospitality.

Garth was not invited. He turned away to meet the red-coated sergeant of police for whom he had sent. Lilith did not see him again until the next morning.

Told by her hostess that Mr. Garth wished to speak with her, she made a hurried effort to adjust her borrowed dress. Though more stylish

He looked soberly past her shoulder at the amused face of her hostess. "Well, yes, I dare say you can. We're going first to Edmonton. Your father is there. I sent him a message that we are coming."

She plucked at the wolverine fringe of her parka hood. "You—you cheat!"

He took her into his arms, regardless of the onlooking lady. "My girl, we are back in civilization. We are first going to be properly married."

"But these caribou suits?"

"Best of flying costumes. We're taking a two-seater. The suits will come in handy again this winter when I teach Mrs. Garth how to drive a dog team. Until that it's to be silks for my girl. I must first testify at the trial. After that we'll hop over to Victoria and take a steamer to Japan for our honeymoon."

"Oh, Alan, how—how delightful! But Japan? Why, I never dreamt a prospector like you would care to travel in the Orient. So, if—if you'd rather go back to the valley, dear—"

Her hostess could no longer keep silent.

"Prospector, Miss Ramill! Is that all you know about Mr. Garth? His father is one of the heads of the Hudson's Bay company. He himself is a member of our parliament, a fellow of the Royal Geographical society, a noted explorer—"

"And the winner of the gamest girl I ever knew," Garth cut in. "Come on, Squaw Lilith. You've proved yourself a mate woman. Now you're going to be my lady wife."

Beating the Drouth

IT WAS the drouth year of 1934. Day after day the sun blazed down from a cloudless sky. Scorching winds blew across the western plains. Wells went dry and rivers became mere trickles.

Down in Oklahoma, Al Gottlieb, owner of the J-R ranch, looked at his herd of 499 prime steers. They were growing thinner every day because they would not eat the brown, dry grass. Unless he could fatten them he was ruined.

One day a peddler stopped at the ranch house. "Better buy a pair of these green goggles to protect your eyes from the glare of the sun," he said. The ranchman took one look through them, then exclaimed "How soon can you get me 498 more pairs?"

A week later the 498 pairs arrived. The ranchman fitted them on his steers. They saw broad fields of rich, green grass and began to graze eagerly. But when it came time to drink from the river they refused. Animal instinct told them that green water is often poisonous. There was only one thing to do and the ranchman did it.

A telegram brought 499 more pairs of goggles—only this time the lenses in them were blue.

Of course, it was a lot of trouble to change the goggles—first green, then blue, then green, then blue, etc.—on 499 steers every day. But that fall the J-R steers topped the Kansas City market because they were in such prime condition.

Grand Fishin' in Grand Canyon

THROUGH the Grand Canyon in Arizona flows the Colorado river. Since "Colorado" is Spanish for "red" its water should be that color, but mostly it's a turbid, yellow stream. Ask Jim Hankins, ex-pro prospector, ex-cowboy and now a tourist guide, if there are and fish in the stream and he will say: "Sure, there's fish there, but I 'low I'm about the only man in Arizona who knows how to ketch them fish. They're right peculiar, same as everything else down in this country. One funny thing about 'em is that they always swim backwards."

"Why? So's to keep the mud from gettin' in their eyes. An' it's jest because o' that fact thet I kin ketch 'em. Them fish is all plumb crazy over eatin' tobacco. So when I am to go fishin' I take me a club and a ten-cent plug o' eatin' tobacco."

"Then I go down to the bottom of the canyon and I pick me out a nice shoal place where I can see the fish as they come swimmin' upstream, tail first. Then I take my pocket-knife and I cut the plug up in little bits. I wade out in the stream a little ways and spread the bait on the top of the water."

"Well, sir, them fish grab it and go down to the bottom and start chewin'. Purty soon they get a hankerin' to spit. Not even a fish can spit under water, so when they come up to the top to spit I jest haul off with my club and hit 'em over the heads. And thet's all there is to it."

How to Catch a Whiffenpoof

VISITORS to Florida are familiar with the whiffenpoof which is found in nearly all the lakes in that state. They can recognize it easily because it looks like a grampus, only it has pink feathers. Not all of them know how to catch one but Jack Worthington of the Lake Wales Highlander says this is the proper way:

The whiffenpoof is very fond of peanuts, so to catch one it is necessary to provide yourself with a bag of peanuts first, then a piece of rope, a pail of mortar, a rowboat and a short piece of 2 by 4. Wait until a good windy day is kicking up the waves on the lake and then go out after the whiffenpoof.

Row out into the lake and wait until a big wave comes along. Lasso it with the piece of rope, pull it alongside and tie it firmly to the boat. Then prop the wave up with the 2 by 4 and tie the bag of peanuts to the 2 by 4. Place the pail of mortar on top of the wave and then sit down and wait patiently.

In a little while the whiffenpoof will smell the peanuts and will rush up for them. As he grabs the sack he will pull the 2 by 4 out from under the wave. The wave falls and spills the pail of mortar all over him. Then he dies of "mortarification" and you have your whiffenpoof.

"China" Name for Porcelain

"China" is the name commonly given all porcelain, whether made of hard or soft paste, so-called because it was a type of pottery brought into Europe from the Far East, entirely different from that made on the Continent. Porcelain probably received its name from the porcelain shell because of its smooth and translucent whiteness. It was made in China for many centuries, and successful attempts to imitate it in Europe, it is said, date from about 1470. The natural or hard-paste porcelain is made from Kaolin and feldspar, the latter imparting its translucency. It is covered with a glaze and is so flintlike that it cannot be scratched. It has a clear ring when struck and is cold to the touch. Soft paste porcelain is the result of European efforts to imitate the hard paste porcelain of China. It is of softer and duller fracture.

Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.
